Myra's personal struggle to overcome a life altering devastating illness brought her a newfound sense of purpose through artistic endeavors. Self-fulfillment is possible and a reward to all of us who learn to channel our energy through self-creativity. All of us struggle to find happiness, while fighting to overcome life's set backs. " We are not perfect, we all have disabilities. " Some disabilities you can see externally, but others are hidden from the world and buried deep within ourselves.. Sometimes the greatest pain is from the disabilities that we hide from others. Myra's greatest accomplishment is helping others find their own passion.

What people say about Myra

"Myra, your speech was international quality. You have great talent. You have the ability to share uncomfortable personal information with your audience. I came to this meeting in a bad mood. You changed that the moment you begin speaking."

Ed Lamont DTM the professional speaker of 20 years and founder of a branch of the Toastmasters International.

"You accomplished what you wanted despite your difficulties and that is inspirational. I am sure you will inspire others the way you have inspired me."

Daphne Dowell Director of Education Old School Square

"Myra Goldick is an accomplished figure and landscape painter... a consummate artist. Throughout the years that Myra has attended my classes I have noticed that her enthusiasm toward advanced study is never daunted by her physical challenges. She believes in, and is testimony to, the healing powers of art. Myra is dedicated to helping others toward this realization. "

Miles Laventhall Professional Artist/Boca Raton Art Instructor.

"Myra's work displays energy and defines creativity-the willingness to take risks. She constantly strives to keep her work fresh while continuing to push the edge of the envelope."

Becky Sanders Director/Boca Raton School of Art

"Myra is as inspirational as the depth of her masterpieces: her art shares the colors of life and the joy of living. Her story and her art are true treasures."
